

AMERICA'S NAVY
RESERVE

YOU CAN STILL SERVE YOUR COUNTRY (WHILE FOCUSING ON YOUR OTHER PRIORITIES)

Family obligations. Career aspirations. Whatever has you thinking about leaving the service, you owe it to yourself to at least consider transitioning into the Navy Reserve.

Here, serving part-time, you can continue to enjoy the best aspects of Active Duty – the pride, the purpose and the camaraderie – all while having more time to devote to your priorities beyond the military.

Think about what you'd be retaining. The opportunity to stay connected. To keep refining your skills. To go on serving a greater cause. And beyond all that, to take advantage of the many tangible Navy Reserve benefits which include:

- A potential affiliation bonus from $5,000 to $20,000
- Four days' basic pay for only two drilling days each month
- Two weeks of paid Annual Training stateside or abroad
- Potential specialty pay offered in critical need areas
- Navy-funded educational assistance for both you and your family
- Points toward retirement to make the most of the time already invested

Right now, the need for experienced servicemembers is great. And no one has more to give or to gain. Visit navyreserve.com to learn more.

There are hundreds of Navy Reserve Centers across the country. Sites typically close to home – plus flexible drilling options to help meet your Reserve service requirements.

Currently serving in the Navy? Know that you can receive guaranteed initial deployment deferment for periods of up to two years when affiliating with the Navy Reserve.
